INTRODUCTION

The Information and Privacy Commissioner, an independent statutory officer of the Legislature, is the head of the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner.

The position of Information and Privacy Commissioner was established by the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, which came into effect October 4, 1993. Since the position was created, there have been two regular Commissioners appointed: David Flaherty (1993-1999) and David Loukidelis (1999-2005).

The role of the Information and Privacy Commissioner has expanded significantly since its inception. Until 2001, the responsibilities of the Commissioner concerned the oversight of the public sector administration of the freedom of information and privacy provisions contained in the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act. However, in 2001, the Information and Privacy Commissioner was also designated Registrar under the Lobbyists Registration Act. In 2003, the Commissioner was given the additional responsibility of overseeing the administration of the private sector privacy provisions of the Personal Information Protection Act.

STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS OF THE APPOINTMENT PROCESS

Part Four of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act sets out the process by which the Information and Privacy Commissioner must be appointed. In section 37(1), it states:

On the recommendation of the Legislative Assembly, the Lieutenant Governor must appoint as the Information and Privacy Commissioner a person who has been unanimously recommended by a Special Committee of the Legislative Assembly for the appointment.

Section 37(2) specifies that the Commissioner holds office for a term of six years.

Until it was repealed by the Legislative Assembly earlier this year,¹ section 37 also contained a provision limiting a Commissioner's appointment to one term: the reappointment of an Information and Privacy Commissioner was not permitted under the Act.

During the passage of that amendment, the House explained that as British Columbia's experience with the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act and the Personal Information Protection Act has increased, and our understanding of the functions of the Information and Privacy Commissioner have grown, it has become apparent that a prohibition on reappointment is no longer appropriate. Allowing for reappointment brings the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act into line with the statutes governing the other statutory officers in British Columbia, as well as those governing Information and Privacy Commissioners in other jurisdictions. It also gives the House the broadest range of candidates to choose from when selecting an Information and Privacy Commissioner for the province.

Members of the Committee observed, during their deliberations, that they benefited from being able to consider the need for continuity in the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner. Members noted that having that option is particularly valuable in light of the important legislative and technological changes that are currently impacting the areas of access and privacy.

This report constitutes the recommendation of the Special Committee to Appoint an Information and Privacy Commissioner to the Legislative Assembly for the appointment of the third Information and Privacy Commissioner for British Columbia, as required by section 37(1) of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS CONDUCTED

The Committee met in Victoria on the following dates for the purposes described.

Monday, November 14, 2005	Committee Procedure and Appointment Process
Thursday, November 17, 2005	Briefing by the Information Policy and Privacy Branch and Strategic Planning and Policy, Ministry of Labour and Citizens' Services
Tuesday, November 22, 2005	Interview and Deliberations

SELECTION PROCESS

In planning the selection process, the Committee considered two options. The first option was an open competition consisting of nationwide advertisements, a candidate screening process and candidate interviews, followed by the Committee's deliberations, and a recommendation to the House. The second option was to proceed incrementally, inviting the incumbent to apply and sit for an interview, then discussing whether or not to open the competition further. The Committee chose the latter option, believing that it was fair to provide the incumbent Commissioner with a preliminary opportunity to discuss his interest in continuing in the role. In making that decision, the Committee also noted that the incumbent possesses outstanding qualifications, and that as Commissioner, he is well-regarded as an effective and reasoned advocate in his areas of statutory responsibility.

The interview confirmed the Committee's original assessment. In his discussion with the Committee, Mr. Loukidelis conveyed his strong commitment to the principles of access to information and privacy protection, demonstrated great expertise in access and privacy law, exhibited a thorough understanding of his role and the role of his Office, displayed a genuine team orientation, acknowledged lessons learned, and articulated a vision for the Commissioner and the Office as well as goals to address existing and emerging issues.

The Committee is pleased with Mr. Loukidelis's excellent record during the past six years as B.C.'s Information and Privacy Commissioner. Members believe that he has shown balanced leadership in his oversight and advocacy roles, and that the province would be well-served by his continued guardianship of our access to information and privacy rights.

Following its deliberations, the Committee unanimously agreed to recommend the reappointment of David Loukidelis for a second term as B.C.'s Information and Privacy Commissioner.

RECOMMENDATION

The Committee unanimously recommends to the Legislative Assembly that David Loukidelis be appointed Information and Privacy Commissioner for the Province of British Columbia, pursuant to section 37(1) of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES

David Loukidelis was first appointed Information and Privacy Commissioner in August of 1999, having practiced law in Vancouver since 1988.

In addition to expertise in local government law, Mr. Loukidelis has an extensive background in access to information and privacy protection issues. A founding member of the B.C. Freedom of Information and Privacy Association (FIPA), he served for a number of years as a director of FIPA and also served as its president. As a member of FIPA's Legislative Task Force, he was the main author of FIPA's law reform report, Information Rights for British Columbia. That report - which contained 73 legislative recommendations - played a key role in the enactment of British Columbia's Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act. During his time with FIPA, Mr. Loukidelis wrote several other reports and commentaries on a variety of access and privacy matters. He was also the author of a number of written submissions made by FIPA as intervenor in appeals to the previous Information and Privacy Commissioner. In 1998, he was awarded FIPA's Information Rights Award, in recognition of his "major contribution to information rights in Canada." He was a member of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Committee of the B.C. Branch of the Canadian Bar Association from 1994 until his appointment as Commissioner.

His extensive experience in access and privacy matters also involved giving legal advice to public bodies, individuals and members of the media. He also advised business interests and labour groups and unions. He acted as counsel in several British Columbia Supreme Court judicial review applications involving decisions of the previous Information and Privacy Commissioner.

Mr. Loukidelis received his LL.B. from Osgoode Hall Law School in 1984, after which he articulated in Vancouver. After his call to the Bar in 1985, he served for a year as a law clerk to a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada. He then attended the University of Oxford, from which he received his B.C.L., a graduate law degree, in 1987. Before beginning his legal studies, he received, in 1980, a M.A. in English Language and Literature (Medieval Studies) from the University of Edinburgh. Before that, he studied English literature for two years at the University of Toronto.
